NEW YORK—Arthur Godfrey continues to be the big news on TV. His “Talent Scouts” & “Friends” shows are the numbers one and two rated shows on TV by the latest ratings. But he still isn’t televised on WDAF-TV in Kansas City. He was banned from the station last February after making a few cracks at one of WDAF-TV’s announcers who had previously said he couldn’t understand why grown up people should have to watch a man (Godfrey) eat salami in front of a TV camera. Arthur’s sponsors hate to lose the Kansas City market and are desperately searching for a way to get him back on. Kaycee with only one TV station still can get the ol’ Redhead on radio. As for Arthur’s proposed plan to drop his Friday morning show in favor of a longer weekend, ‘taint so. CBS bigwigs nixed the idea.

With Fred Allen definitely retired for the time being, a scramble is on for the job as his replacement on his “Two For the Money” quizzer. Leading contenders for the job are Herb Shriner, rising comedian Roger Price and Broadway hooper Ray Bolger, with Shriner having the inside track. . . Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard, one of radio’s top comedy teams, have started rolling on films for their promising new TV show which will come on early in October on ABC. . . Another longtime radio favorite, Joan Davis, has made a pilot film of a new TV show and reports have it that Joan’s old sarcastic humor really comes over which may mean more strong competition for Lucille Ball and Imogene Coca, TV’s top comedians.

One of TV’s most promising dramatic series has been set for fall with the purchase of the complete Mark Twain library. The series will be on film and will do all or parts of all the Twain masterpieces. Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn are a couple of personalities that can’t help but go over on TV . . . Irene Dunne, who apparently knows a good thing when she sees it, is reported to have been paid $84,000 for her filmed 2-minute intros on the Playhouse of Stars.

Rapid-fire newsmen Walter Winchell has been definitely set for a Sunday evening spot which will be a good test of Winchell drawing power. He’ll be up against two powerhouses, Ed Sullivan and the Comedy Hour. . . Don Herbert, whose “Mr. Wizard” show was recently cited by a parents group as the top children’s science show on TV, has departed the U. S. for a five week vacation in Sunny Italy. . . Ginger Rogers, whose on-again off-again TV debut has kept few fans awake nights, is now scheduled to star in a dramatic series in the fall. . . The Stork Club, which was supposedly going to be vastly improved with its new half-hour Saturday night format, has improved only imperceptibly because it still has emcee Sherman Billingsley as a millstone around its neck.

It was inevitable that that fearless defender of justice, Superman, would soar onto TV. The great man of the comic strips starts Sept. 15 on a five times a week basis. . . Dagmar, having TV troubles recently, is rumored to be spitting with her hubby, actor Danny Dayton. . . Joel McCrea, one of Hollywood’s top cowboy stars, and a good straight actor besides, has been inked as one of the participating stars on CBS’ new Four-Star Playhouse drama series. Previously signed were tough guy Dick Powell and smoothie Charles Boyer.
Letters to the Editor

All letters must be signed, with addresses. Names will be withheld if requested.

I would like to start a crusade against Tom Duggan. "Stop viewing him and stop buying his products." Maybe that way we could get rid of that conceited jerk. When he starts criticizing a woman far superior to him, he's hit the depths.

Chicago, Ill. MRS. J. VALENTIC

Obviously Tom Duggan's fan mail must be decreasing very much for him to try and stir up such a cruel slanderous feud with Kay Westfall, one of Chicago's most beloved TV personalities.

Just think how awful this world would be if everyone were like Tom and how nice it would be if everyone were like Kay. No more Duggan for me.

Blue Island, Ill. MRS. JERRY VAN DYCK

I suggest Tom Duggan resume his visits to a psychiatrist to find out what his mental ailments are. Those ulcerous statements against a sweet girl like Kay Westfall are just too much for a sane man.

Kenosha, Wisc. MRS. HELENA DWYER

(Ed. Note: Judging from the mail to this office, the feud (whether for publicity or the real thing) is being won by Kay, hands down.)

... The two longest commercials on TV are Libby's and Evan's. During either one, you could take a bath, wash your hair and read a book before they were finished. If they show us all their merchandise, there's no sense in going down to the store. Let's cut those commercials.

Riverside, Ill. CAROL CRANE

... Is it true that Kukla, Fran and Ollie will be on only once a week when they come back in September?

Chicago, III. JANE HELANDER

(Ed. Note: They're slated to be on Sunday, on Channel 5, starting tomorrow (August 24).)

I am a teenager and I like "My Little Margie" very much. The author of that article on the show was unduly critical.

Dundee, Ill. DIANE CRICHETON

Why did they ever bring back Joe E. Brown on Arthur Godfrey's Show. Besides being a bore, he hogs the program—talent and scouts suffer.

LEAST OF ALL—A SOCIAL REVOLUTION

ANTHROPOLOGISTS studying American cultural habits were shocked a few years back when they found their charts were way off base. They had the American pegged as a creature who fled home every Saturday night to let off the steam accumulated during the week. Then, suddenly, in 1949, this tribal custom was discarded and a new one adopted. Instead of a Saturday night spree, Americans were spending bath night in front of a television set, watching themselves being satirized by a rubber-faced 27 year old comic named Sid Caesar.

Mr. Caesar, the man responsible for this social revolution, is a formidable man indeed. There's never been a comedian like him. He's without a peer as a pantomist and a phoney linguist. He's able to duplicate vocally practically all the sounds ever heard on land or sea. Add to these qualities good taste, a deep understanding of humor and his shrewd ability to kid U. S. manners and morals and you've got Sid Caesar, our choice as the top comic on television.

A good answer as to why Sid Caesar has hit the top is his practically infallible hearing. Before Sid was a comedian he was a musician and his perception of sound is astonishing. Combining this with his talented set of tonsils Sid is able to vocally reproduce such diverse sounds as the whirr of a telephone dial, a punching bag, an airplane motor, an infantry battle, a pin ball machine or a machine gun rattling, all with hilarious effects.

Many comedians are remembered for a certain routine that they did in vaudeville or on TV. These great routines are usually rationed and most comics have but three or four. In the few years that Sid Caesar has been on TV he has created dozens of classic routines. His most famous is his airplane dogfight, but close behind are such gems as the six month old baby plotting discomfort for his parents, the frustrated pin ball machine, and the gangster about to be bumped off.

Sid is fortunate also in having for a partner the brilliant comedienne Imogene Coca. Their parodies on foreign and old movies are the closest thing to an art form yet developed on TV. Whether it's deflating a great lover or a great ham, Caesar and Coca always bring off the job with extremely funny results.

So there he is, Sid Caesar, the man of a thousand faces, from sardonic to idiotic; the man of a thousand sounds, from saber rattle to nickelodeon; the man of a thousand sketches from Russian diplomat to expectant father; the most imitated man on TV and our choice as television's top comic.
TELEVISION has often been characterized as a gluttonous vulture dining off the remains of many show business careers. Leading lights in the entertainment field have been heard to complain, with much gnashing of teeth, that numerous topflight acts, good for years in vaudeville, are killed off after only one or two appearances on TV.

There’s no question that TV has forced a survival-of-the-fittest regime onto show business. Only the super personalities have been able to survive on a week-to-week basis. But TV also has been responsible for unearthing from their graves many acts that have been forgotten by a fickle public.

The favorite device for a show biz star gone to seed is to lean on nostalgia. Acts that wowed ‘em in the golden twenties are brought on TV to get in their dying show business gasps (and plenty of that luscious TV money). Most of the acts spend their time on camera (usually on Toast of the Town or Milton Berle's show) treating the audiences to thick doses of tearful reminiscing.

Not that nostalgia is bad in itself. The past in retrospect always seems to take on a pleasant haze and there are few, outside of a psychiatrist’s office, who do not like a trip back to the good old days.

But how about a guy like Eddie Cantor. As one of show business’ all-time greats, Eddie is deserving of the utmost in respect and veneration. Yet on TV, Eddie’s act is an hour long monologue about the great moments in the Cantor career. “And then I played the old Orpheum in Sheboygan.” Like the endless series of off-color jokes in a train’s smoking car, Eddie’s stories begin to wear a bit on the listener. This phase of “entertainment” in the Cantor career has been going on so long that the younger generation is beginning to wonder if he had any talent in the first place.

Ted Lewis is another glaring example. Ted's career had reached its twilight and the public had settled back expecting never to see Ted's battered hat and clarinet again. Even the Lewis imitators, who at one time numbered in the hundreds, seemed to be disappearing.

Then Ed Sullivan, who specializes in bringing back the ghosts, brought back Ted Lewis. In front of a new generation that didn't remember the glories of the Lewis past, Ted went into his old routine about "Be Yourself, that's the only way to live, don't imitate me" in his patented sing-song whisper. Youngsters would have to dig back into old newspaper files to find that Ted, irritated by imitators who often did his act better than he could, wrote "Be Yourself" in hopes that it would scare off the competition. Nowadays there's no competition to scare.

Maudlin as Ted could get, he could never match the queen of 'em all, Sophie Tucker. Sophie is so overcome with emotion at the fact that she's a beloved and legendary show business figure that she's liable to burst into tears if there's a male shoulder manly enough to support her forlorn but oversize frame. Sophie still retains a lot of her old time spark and after she gets off a few rousing songs in her inimitable way, only the meanest audience would deny her the right to spill a few tears. Some of these days we MAY miss that honey.

If it were limited to the first rate acts, TV's graveyard revival would be an admirable thing. But TV has dug deeper. . . . Although the TV public has fortunately been spared the sight of the Dolly Sisters, many acts that were never more than third rate are regularly unearthed for TV's endless string of variety shows.

The outstanding exhibition of nostalgia for nostalgia's sake took place on Milton Berle's show. He brought a group of old time songwriters to play the songs that they had written in the twenties. Aside from Sigmund Romberg, the songwriters were a bunch of unknowns and the songs turned out to be the banal hits of the twenties, that nowadays would be played for a few weeks and then happily forgotten. But some enterprising Berle writer dug them up and the Berle audience (then the largest on TV) was given a half-hour of forgotten and trivial songs. There wasn't a wet eye in the house.

If there's one thing you've gotta give TV producers credit for, it's ingenuity. Whenever one of those bright fellows gets hard up for an idea, he can quickly resolve his troubles by hiring four celebrities to sit at a table (this is known as a panel) with some effervescent emcee while the panelists play at ancient parlor games.

As if the summer months on TV weren't dreary enough, 11 (count 'em) 11 new panel shows have sprung up during the past eight weeks. But, fortunately for the viewers sanity, only one is scheduled to remain this fall. It's "I've Got a Secret," a brighter-than-average panel quizzer that gets its special glow from its emcee, that perpetual adolescent, Garry Moore.

If the present trend continues, Garry will be keeping abreast of Arthur Godfrey in the contest to see who spends the most time in front of a TV camera. Arthur's morning radio show is scheduled to be telecast in its entirety in the fall which will give him a total of 6½ hours a week on TV, while Garry, with his five-day-a-week hour show plus "I've Got a Secret" will have only (poor fellow) 5½ hours.

Garry can be best described as the Arthur Godfrey for weary housewives. Although his humor is on a much higher level than Arthur's, his appeal lies in his manner rather than his matter. Women looking upon this crew-cut juvenile can't seem to resist the urge to mother him. And Garry, aware of this appeal, plays up to the ladies. Looking like a squirrel, an animal whose only appeal is its cuteness, Garry adds a pixie innocence that the ladies find irresistible.

That is not to say that Garry isn't a very funny fellow. He had an evening TV show last season that folded because his humor was on perhaps too high a level. He's an erstwhile and devoted pupil of Chicago's Ransom Sherman, the master bumbler and connoisseur of cliches. For the average TV viewer, this type of humor apparently borders on the obscure, judging from the rough time of it Ransom has had trying to make a go of it on TV.

Garry shared the mike with Ransom on that wonderful old radio show "Club Matinee," which spent most of its time lampooning the rest of the radio world. Garry originally wanted to be a writer (he collaborated on an unpublished novel with the late great F. Scott Fitzgerald) but every time he tried to get a job as a radio writer, station managers would get a load of his gib, tart patter and made him a comedian.

After stints at local stations in the east, he hooked on as a sports announcer in St. Louis, from where he was lured to Chicago by Ransom Sherman. Garry's already bright wit was brought to a polished gleam by Ransom, the master. Garry's own humor, which centered its attack on the pseudo-cultured, was given a broader base as he learned from Ransom the ability to assemble a mass of contradicting cliches, delivered in a mock-serious voice. The Moore career was in flight.

From Club Matinee Garry went into the long and profitable partnership with the clown prince of buffoonery, Jimmy Durante. From Jimmy, Garry learned two important things, humility and the very same idea that no matter how much an audience laughs at you, you've gotta make them love you.
The Durante-Moore radio show went on for seven years. Jimmy handled the broad comedy and Garry the razor-sharp satire. One of Garry's best stunts was to do takeoffs on popular song lyrics (which seldom can bear close scrutiny). After a Moore parody was finished, the original song could hardly be taken seriously.

Although Garry showed great skill in dissecting the phonies, he seldom descended to meanness. It was this quality, prominent in both Jimmy and Garry, that made Durante & Moore such a wonderful team.

One of the famous Moore pomp deflators took place on the night of Harry Truman's election in 1948. Aging commentator H. V. Kaltenborn, a staunch Dewey supporter, was on the radio all night, constantly asserting that the latest trends indicated that Dewey was a sure winner. When morning rolled around, a hoarse Kaltenborn was still looking for that trend. The classic Moore comment came a few days later. "H. V. Kaltenborn had to spend election night sitting up with a sick trend."

Typical of the top caliber guests appearing on Garry Moore's daytime show is poet-biographer-folk balladeer Carl Sandburg, who turned up to give a demonstration of his folk singing.

When TV came along, Garry quickly latched onto a show of his own. His daytime show (he says it's Club Matinee all over again, with pictures) spots some playful patter between Garry and announcer Durward Kirby, an old standby from Chicago radio days, some boyish clowning by Garry and plenty of music and guest stars. Vocalist Denise Lor, whose singing doesn't inspire, but who has a very womanly figure, also gets into the comedy.

Popular as Garry's daytime show is, "I've Got A Secret" stands a good chance to become even better rated. The panel is one of TV's cleverest. Ex-film actress Laraine Day, wife of ulcerous N. Y. Giant manager Leo Durocher, is the sharpest, but stuffy Britisher Melville Cooper seems to be the favorite.

"LIFE BEGINS
YOU'RE NEVER TOO OLD

Over 400 years of worldly experience as represented by (l. to r.) Fred Stein, 82, Georgiana Carhart, 86, Captain Edward Lane, 84, emcee Jack Barry, Fred Cox, 81 and Jessie Graham, 85.

When the infirmed and ancient George Bernard Shaw began living the life of a vegetable in his later years, he made a classic statement about growing old. "Old age," commented the great cynic, "is just a matter of buttoning and unbuttoning."

The ulcerous playwright (a spry gentleman most of his life) was only partly right. For living in this atom age of ours is a large representative group of elders who don't subscribe to Shaw's button theory. Everyone of them is as smart and as up-to-date as the zipper.

There is something warming about a sharp and alert old timer. You can spot him easily by the mischievous twinkle in his eye, the jaunty, assured cock of the head, the kindly, intelligent lines on his face, the interest he shows in the young.

Realizing the infectious appeal of the elder set, the young television emcee, Jack Barry, and his producer Dan Enright, organized a group of voluble octogenarians for a radio and TV show called "Life Begins At Eighty." The format was simple. Five alert oldsters would ad-lib answers to general queries on manners and morals. Given full rein, the show promised to be a delightful collection of ideas about the younger generation—as seen by the older generation.

Since the program's TV debut (currently sponsored, it had been on an off-and-on basis), "Life Begins At Eighty" has been a pleasant, often funny panel show.

High priestess in "Eighty's" laugh department is 86-year-old Georgiana Carhart, a trigger-witted former opera singer who speaks with the unequivocal assurance of a platoon sergeant. Her role is that of the chief prodder of the rest of the panel. Besides carrying out a phony but enjoyable feud with panelist Fred Stein—who is four years her junior—Mrs. Carhart expounds unblushingly about such matters as petting, birth control and a nagging wife.

The perfect foil for Mrs. Carhart is Stein, with whom she seldom, if ever, agrees. Old Fred is a conservative "old guardian” who believes in such traditional sanctities as long engagements, spanking and women in the kitchen. Georgiana pooh-poohs old Fred’s ideas and has in effect labeled him an “old fogey.” Clever as he is, Mr. Stein never seems to get the final or the decisive word in when Mrs. Carhart starts firing away with her verbal six shooters.

Georgiana rules the roost also as the most amorously-inclined of the panel that boasts of “over 400 years experience.” There were even rumblings that in spite of her war with Mr. Stein, Georgiana was engaged to him. She squashed this rumor, explaining Fred away as being “too immature” for marriage.

She has admitted that there was still the possibility of her getting married again (she is a widow) because, “I’m kinda lonely and the nights are getting cool.” On one particular occasion she told the handsome straight man-emcee, Jack Barry, “If I was 55 years younger and 75 pounds lighter, you wouldn’t get out of the room.”

The balance of the panel, including Jessie Graham, 85, a former character actress who appeared in all of George M. Cohan’s productions, represents a nice balance for the Carhart-Stein bloc. Miss Graham, not as talky as Georgiana, states her views with a confident nod of the head and an air of finality equal to that of Miss Carhart. Kindly Fred Cox, 83, seems the most learned of the group and handles himself like a gentleman of Groton—always polite and never partaking of any nasty “feuds.” A frequent panel visitor is Captain Edward Lane, a bearded old “sea dog” who looks as if he sailed with Lord Nelson.

When the panel isn’t trying too hard this modest panel entry offers some warm, enjoyable moments. It’s too bad George Bernard Shaw isn’t still around. He would have been a choice addition to the show.

IT'S A KLOSE BATTLE

IF a fight announcer were to get lost in WENR-TV's penthouse studios some Thursday evening, he might feel right at home. Particularly after he stumbled on a "tame" little fracas that emanates from one of the studios there.

No body blows are exchanged but a battle rages just the same. In fact, the announcer might find himself delivering the following spiel:

"Ladeez and gentlemen: Tonight's main event features a battle of the wits. In this corner we have "Slugger" Virginia Klose in navy gown attended by her seconds, Taylor (15), and Kevin (11). Challenging them is Woody "The Kid" Klose, in trim business suit, supported by his aides, Nicky (13), and Christy (7). Ladeez and gentlemen, you can expect a Klose battle, but a clean one. The four-round bout will determine who is smarter in the Klose family, Virginia and her charges or Woody and his team."

Referee John Weigel sounds the gong and the charge is on. "Which is heavier, a cubic foot of water or a cubic foot of ice?" But Taylor lands a direct hit on the scoreboard with a quick "They're both the same." The second blow is aimed at Kevin: "If you reverse the hands on a clock set at 9:45, what time is it?" But he parries nicely with "8:50."

The main contenders aren't so agile. Their defenses crumble frequently. Their timing of comebacks are a little slow. Virginia stumbles over a definition of malt and Woody thinks Nijinsky immortalized the Dying Swan ballet. (For shame. He should have known it was Pavlova.)

The bell signals end of Round 1. Now for a brief sketch of the combatants: Woody and Virginia have been associated with Chicago Klose-Ups, an informal half-hour interview session on Friday evenings. But since haggling over brainpower arose in the Klose quarters, they decided to settle the issue publicly. Thus was "Family Battle" born some short weeks ago.

Woody and Virginia have been partners in more than marriage ever since they were wed back in 1935. They collaborated on writing and producing such network radio shows as "Family Ma," "My Best Girls" and "Mommie and the Men." They also starred on "Red Hook 31," a Mr. and Mrs. radio show from their farm in Duchess County, N.Y. Woody was a former radio announcer, program director and ad agency executive while Virginia has been a TV and magazine writer.

Whoever wins the mental boxing match each week, viewers are assured of an interesting battle. And there are two more Klose replacements warming up at home in Winnetka, should a teammate get rusty. And when daughters Deborah, 4, and Victoria, 2, begin uttering words of wisdom, they'll probably join their parents and brothers on "Family Battle."

"Family Battle" can be seen at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Chicago Klose-Ups at 9:30 p.m. Friday, both on WENR-TV (Channel 7).

This week, over the nation, Zenith dealers cordially invite you to witness an achievement in Quality Television. Here, in the new Zenith Royalty Line— is the climax of a thirty-three year reputation for Quality Leadership in the products of radiomic science.

You will recognize first in these magnificent new instruments an almost total absence of the nuisances of the past. In the wonderful and effortless switching from channel to channel, with the need for retuning all but absent. In the sparkling brilliance and sharp contrast of the vastly improved picture. In the reflection-proof quality of the new tube. In the provision for UHF.

And to you who have experienced the difficulties of distance and fringe-area reception—a revelation in improvement. Even in fringe areas, your Zenith can be tuned with one knob and the picture “locked” to eliminate further tuning.

Here is the result of months of testing and retesting in virtually impossible TV areas. The result of vastly greater research. The result of many more dollars in superior engineering, costlier parts, finer assembling.

Your Zenith dealer invites you to see the new Zenith TV. From the moment this magnificent instrument comes into your home—you will know there is nothing in all television to compare with your choice.

BUILT-IN PROVISION FOR UHF
Every Zenith TV set ever built has built-in provision for tuner strips to receive the coming new-type UHF stations without the use of any outside converter or adapter. No other Television manufacturer can make that statement. Another example of Zenith engineering foresight that protects your investment in TV.

(Above) New Zenith Television Console Model K2209R, 21-inch (245 sq. in.). Graceful classic simplicity with genuine, lustrous mahogany veneers and selected hardwoods. $379.95$. See this and the many other Zenith models now on display at your dealer's.

*All Zenith TV prices include Federal Excise Tax and Warranty. West Coast and for South prices slightly higher.

WHEN young lovers melt at the sound of a tune and refer to it possessively as "our song," you can bet they've already endorsed the first page in their scrapbook of memories.

Incurable romantics will tell you that every nostalgic memory in their lives is associated with a melody. Even hard-as-nails businessmen, cynics and pessimists have an Achilles heel when it comes to music. Sometimes they'll actually admit—although grudgingly—that somewhere in their memory books a tune played a big role.

Often thereby hangs a tale worthy of exploitation. Bill Gwinn, an unfamiliar name around the Midwest, makes it his business on "This Is My Melody."

Beamed from Los Angeles each Thursday evening, "This Is My Melody" pokes a nosy television eye into the individual scrapbooks that music built.

The show has borrowed a gimmick from amateur hour productions. Each guest (who first writes a letter) repeats a tale for the audience and then is asked to perform. He can recall his song by singing, dancing or playing a musical instrument.

Just to add a little excitement, contestants are judged by the audience. With the aid of an applause meter—each guest happily trudges offstage with first, second or third prize. (There are only three guests per program.)

Host of this half-hour epic is the West Coast version of Bert Parks. Bill Gwinn (born William Madison Gwinn) is a misplaced teacher who found that TV could be more lucrative than guiding young minds—and probably less frustrating. Identified by a wide, good-natured smile, Bill uses his grin and gab to magnetize his viewers and inspire confidence from his guests.

In the lean days before TV, Bill had taught for nine years and was head of the English speech and drama department of Marin Jr. college near San Francisco. During World War II he made 16 mm. films which he wrote, directed and occasionally filled in as an actor. Bill was eventually tagged for radio and emceed some local San Francisco music shows before emerging as a TV personality.

Husky Bill, who is married and the father of two sons (Bill, 11, and Michael, 8) shows the same boundless vitality that spurted Bert Parks to success. He sings equally as well, if not better, than Bert. Perhaps his career will parallel the fabulous TV rise of the East Coast wonder boy.

It's sometimes hard to determine whether "This Is My Melody" is a glorified amateur show or a junior "We The People" type of human interest. Whatever the pitch, the program has introduced a new personality and has injected a refreshing sentiment into a sometimes hardened TV scene.

—Shirley Elman

"Super Ghost" is Super Tough...

A GREAT paradox is taking place this summer. Instead of TV going into the living room, the living room has gone to TV. The result is what befuddled viewers have labeled the Parlor Game Craze.

Frantic producers, looking for suitable (and cheap) replacements for their vacationing stars, have gone back to their childhood and reincarnated old house games. Charades, Coffee Pot and Hang the Butcher have been slicked up and presented under such titles as "Pantomime Quiz," "Twenty Questions" and "Down You Go." The latest entry in the parlor sweepstakes is the most complicated—a stepped-up edition of Three-Thirds of a Ghost, called "Super Ghost."

"Super Ghost" is the brainchild of Mr. Louis Cowan and his advertising agency of the same name. Mr. Cowan is virtually the only big Chicago producer who has not been won over to the spurious theory that a good TV show has to originate from New York or Hollywood. The line of Cowan productions is a formidable one: "Quiz Kids," "Down You Go," "Ask Me Another" and "Pet Shop" besides "Super Ghost"—all Windy City products.

Since "Super Ghost" debuted a few weeks ago, it has stirred up a batch of controversy among old parlor game fans who blink in amazement at the complexity of the game. One TV mogul said he could understand why Dr. Bergen Evans was chosen to emcee the show: "They had to get a college professor to explain the darn thing!"

In brief, "Super Ghost" is a word game in which a panel of four, equipped with black boards, build up words, letter by letter, WITHOUT finishing said word. But this barely shows the complexity of the game.

Professor Bergen Evans oversees this hyped spelling bee in his usual learned fashion, giving clues for each word. The clues, amusing as they are, help the panel nary an iota. Sample: for the word coloratura, "murder on the high C’s"; for sacroiliac, "you can throw this out but it will always be back."
IN THE PARLOR

The panel members are nice, likeable, average people, but unfortunately you can’t play this game well and be average. Gail Compton, proprietor of "Pet Shop" is the most conspicuous of the lot. Yet in spite of his cum laude degree from Dartmouth, Gail is often guilty of some alarming spelling blunders.

Robert Pollak, ex-drama critic for the Chicago Sun Times, Sherl Stern, a housewife, and Hope Ryden, a model, complete the panel. Miss Ryden can’t spell either, but no one seems to care. She and Miss Stern add enough window dressing to the program to compensate for sloppy spelling.

The main trouble with "Super Ghost" is that it never gets off the ground. After three performances, not one exciting word battle between panelists had taken place. Not one series of bluffs or by-play between the guests. Instead, dull challenges and abrupt endings to a word that fizzles before two letters are added to it.

Strangely enough, the confused viewers have an opportunity to enter in what is absolutely the easiest TV contest going. Their contribution is a word—any word. If used, the possibility of winning a rather sizable amount of money is good. Just what constitutes a winner is left up to the instinct of Dr. Evans. Something about the number of letters in a word. But it’s easy dough any way you look at it.

Lou Cowan and his boys are working hard to simplify and perk up "Super Ghost." They may discover that the game is just too difficult to make interesting, at least in its present format. Grandpa, who’d never recognize it as the old style "Three Thirds of a Ghost," might have a suggestion.

"Toss out all the durn fool fancy trimmings, and get down to Spelling."

"Super Ghost" is seen Sundays at 6:00 p.m. on channel 5, WNBQ.
GREAT DAY IN THE GRAVEYARD

shrine someday to Ed Wynn, who until a few years ago was retired and only a happy memory to the public. But television stirred that old show biz urge in Ed and he became a regular on the All Star Revue. Sometimes Ed's humor crackled with its old time flair, but more often it only creaked. Young TV viewers could see good reasons for the death of vaudeville.

Other show business names that had no business making a comeback on TV are numerous. Harry Richman, who can neither sing nor dance, has tried to do both on several TV shows. In spite of his last name, Henny Youngman has been around a long time and his material has shown how shopworn it really is on his appearances on TV, which luckily for viewers are becoming more infrequent. Fading movie stars Paulette Goddard and Errol Flynn appeared in two fiascos on "Toast of the Town" in which they gave a strong indication that movies might be better than ever without them. Morey Amsterdam, favorite whipping boy of other comics and for good reason, is a perfect example of an old burlesque comic whose brass becomes tarnished on TV.

Next year we're due for another dose of how great show business used to be. George Jessel, who has made a career out of name-dropping, is scheduled to make his debut as one of the participating stars on the All Star Revue. With Cantor and Jessel both on television, the viewers' cup will overflow— with Eddie's and Georgie's tears. Like the little boy who becomes tired of hearing his grandfather talk about the good old days, televiewers will stop idol worshipping, brush aside the tears and, with great relish, turn to another channel.

So TV, the great act destroyer, is also the great act reviver. The relics from the show biz graveyard are given a last fling before being buried forever. Except, maybe, for Eddie Cantor.
GARRY MOORE STORY

Durward Kirby, an old pal from Garry’s Chicago days, aids in the humor department on Garry’s daytime show. Here Durward appears as Winston L. Mittenjuice, homespun sage.

Cooper, who has played an English fop in more movies than he likes to remember, never gets the answers. He can probably trace his popularity to the fact that he is one Englishman that Americans can easily feel superior to. The other panelists are shapely actress Jayne Meadows and likeable emcee-about-TV Bill Cullen.

Garry’s rapidly expanding TV activities leave him little time for his hobbies: golf, sailing and a massive collection of jazz records, mostly old-time New Orleans stars ranging from Bunk Johnson to Louis Armstrong. Now 35 years old with a wife and two sons, Garry is living the American dream with a home in Southern California. He still has one TV frustration to overcome however. Although his bow tie and crew cut are a joy to Housewives, Unincorporated, he still hasn’t won a sizable male audience via TV. With proper handling “Secret” could do the trick.

—Robert Cunniff

The Garry Moore Show is seen Mon. thru Fri. at 12:30 p.m. on Channel 4 and “I’ve Got a Secret” at 9:30 p.m. on Thurs., Channel 9.

WHAT A MISERABLE SUMMER

by JACK MABLEY

Here it is time again for the Summer Summary. Which of those wonderful little items called "summer replacements" would we like to have around all year?

Not very many this year. It has been a miserable summer on television.

In the couple or three television summers preceding this one a viewer had the feeling that the warm months were given over to experimenting and trying fresh approaches and ideas. It gave us such excellent productions as Saturday Square and Cameo Theater.

The summer of 1952 was a season of mediocrity. "Throw in a quiz show" was the cry of the production wheels as they rushed out the door to catch the plane for Paris.

With few exceptions, quizzers and a batch of Grade Z films from Hollywood were our summer hot plate.

For example:

The Hunter—This is a mystery, the mystery being how an actor with the talents of Barry Nelson can go through this 30 minutes of tripe without busting out laughing. It is difficult to describe the amateurish script and the ham acting. They can best be compared with a third rate 1923 Hollywood melodrama. In one of their Keystone Kop chases through a land supposedly in Europe, I'm certain I recognized the Bear Mountain Bridge, in territory inhabited by some of my kinfolk in New York.

Mister Peepers—One of the exceptions. Wally Cox and a lot of foolishness, well written and well produced. My personal reaction was that writer David Swift and Cox made too many concessions to corn, to appeal to the so-called mass mind. However, it's a minority opinion, and even if valid, Mister Peepers is an excellent show which we hope enjoys a long life.

The Big Payoff: This is about as smooth a piece of production as you'll see in a giveaway show. But it's still a giveaway.

It replaced the Comedy Hour. The best commentary on the show comes from the ratings, which show the competing Toast of the Town taking a deserved big jump in audience.

Saturday Night Dance Party: Credit should go to NBC for devoting some time and money to trying to keep Saturday night alive on television. Whether you enjoyed this show depended largely on whether you like jazz and Jerry Lester. I happen to like both, so had a fine time watching it.

Information Please: Mr. Waring's summer substitute was a disappointment. It contained all the ingredients of the radio success, but lacked some spark which would make it come to life on TV. Maybe the experts were camera shy. It didn't help a bit to put it on film late in the summer.

Boss Lady and My Little Margie: Two Hollywood things which I managed to miss. But reaction of viewers and some other columnists was... I guess the proper word is lukewarm.

The Best of Groucho: Another exception, and a pattern likely to be followed by more shows next summer.

Ask Me Another: This Chicago originated network sports quiz proves one thing at least—15 minutes of Tom Duggan in one night is plenty.
DEAR BOSS:

September's gonna be a wonderful month—brings a double blessing! Not only will I Love Lucy return, but My Little Margie will depart.

I think it's gonna be easier to say nice things about the Chicago record pantomimists, Clark Davis and Bill Cain, than it has been to see something good in Paul Dixon. Cain and Davis, on the new Star Time show Tuesdays, have better comedy sense than Dixon and they confine their talents strictly to pantomiming acts rather than trying to be oilgusher cute like Dixon.

Maybe Cain and Davis won't even take time off the platters to introduce their guests after the recent fox pass with Chet Roble. Davis rushes gaily up to Chet (panting loudly—after all, he'd just done a pantomime) and goes on for some time about this 'great artist we all love, who needs no introduction, who has pioneered a new jazz style (look ma, no shoes) and what shows you doin' now fellas?, etc.' In fact, he covered everything twice over—except the guest's name!

Have you seen The Hunter, with Barry Nelson? No matter who's been hunted each week, they never let Nelson hunt up a good story. You get more characterization and suspense in Steve Canyon.

Speaking of which—when will some great benefactor of television rise up from the muck of mediocrity and spawn us a video version of POGO? That would be a SHOW. Live actors and Scaramouche masks maybe? But don't tamper with that marvelous Pogo dialogue, men.

CHICAGO—Educators and civic leaders are doing a slow burn over some of the oldtime flickers telecast by the local stations. Not only are some of the Hollywood oldies chockfull of the gin-jazz-sex whoopee of the 1920's, but the World War II films are still hammering away at hate for Japanese and Germans who are now our military allies. Some of the local sponsors had better take a close look at the product they're putting out via TV.

Kay Westfall, WENR-TV beauty who co-starred in "My Sister Eileen" at Salt Creek summer stock, was asked afterwards by her veteran co-star Patsy Kelly to travel east for further performances. That's in contrast to the usual procedure of picking up a local actress in each whistle stop, High praise indeed.

Rumor Dept.—It's NOT true that sportscaster Tom Duggan got into shape for his feud with Kay Westfall by shoving small children around. . . . It IS true comic Ernie Simon, now a WGN radio disk jockey, will be back on TV in the fall, with a network show on channel 9. . . . It's NOT true that Variety overlord Don Wilson is engaged. . . . It IS true that Tommy Bartlett will keep his radio format for the TV version of Welcome Travelers, scheduled for this fall. . . . It's NOT true that newscaster Clifton Utley and critic Jack Mabley are related. They just look alike.

It IS true that chubby Frazier Thomas will make a TV comeback this fall with a brand new kid show, Frazier to act as emcee. . . . It's NOT true that Down You Go panelist Carmelita Pope is Creative Cookery chef Francois Pope's daughter. She's his niece. . . . It IS true that TV stars Danny O'Neil (recently separated from his missus) and Pati Geraghty are that way about each other.

Leonard Dubkin's new Chicago Talent Directory is out. It covers radio, TV, films and modeling, and is available at 9117 Merchandise Mart Building. . . . Willie O'Malley, the popular steward at the Actors Club of Chicago, is leaving his post. Greener pastures. . . . Cornelius (Corny) Peeples, TV Row's most unusual name, celebrates his 20th anni in TV-radio. He's a vet of "Hawkins Falls."

TV SPORTSCAST:

For Sportscasting, There’s Nothing Like Home Sweet Home . . .

By Bob Elson

NOTE: In the absence of our vacationing sports editor Ed Pazdur, WBKB’s star sportscaster Bob Elson fills in as this week’s columnist. Bob can be seen Mon. thru Fri., over WBKB nightly at 6:00 and 10:15.

DOING an occasional guest column gives me a chance to answer fans who write asking about other major league ball parks, what I think of them and where I sit to describe the games. . . . No parks, of course, are alike. In one park I can reach out and shake hands with the umpire and in another I’m seated so far away the infield looks as if I was looking through the wrong end of my binoculars. . . . Here’s a capsule description of each of the American League Parks:

Fenway Park, Boston: Good shape. The grandstands are low (no higher than Comiskey Park’s lower grandstand) and my broadcasting booth is located to the right of the plate in good sight of all the action. The park itself is well kept. Seats are dusted before each game and the press is treated cordially. The booth is large and airy, which makes work all the more conducive.

Griffith Stadium, Washington: About the worst park in the league. My booth is located on a small box atop the roof and the equipment is poor. A windy day is hazardous. In fact, I almost lost my statistician, Chuck Wenz, when a hard gust of wind threatened to blow him over the roof and into the foul net.

Yankee Stadium, New York: Another fine ballpark. My set-up is back of home plate but too far back to catch all of the action.

Shibe Park, Philadelphia: Here, I’m so high up I’m actually isolated. The press is ignored and latest facts on the Mackmen are difficult to get.

Municipal Stadium, Cleveland: A tremendous park, it’s located just a few blocks off Lake Erie. The press is seated with the fans just above home plate in the second deck. Statistical service is fine and it’s nice to be outdoors for a change.

Briggs Stadium, Detroit: Here the set-up is unique. I’m lowered in sort of a “gondola” beneath the lower stands to a vantage point just 25 feet of home plate. The view is the best in the league.

Sportsman’s Park, St. Louis: The Brownies are the most thoughtful hosts. I have a large booth to myself (just above the plate) with the finest equipment available. Another fine courtesy is an usher on hand at all times to serve the visiting press.

Comiskey Park, Chicago: Home sweet home, and I might add—perfect facilities. Every effort is made by Eddie Short to anticipate the needs of the local and visiting press. However, as a suggestion, I think our position can be improved by constructing booths under the lower deck, or by lowering one of those Detroit “gondolas” over the side. Even listeners complain about fans yelling directly in front of our booth.

Well, that about summarizes it, fans. It’s a pleasure to fill-in for Ed Pazdur, who by this time must be basking in that Colorado sun. Meanwhile—Stick with those Sox!

Verne Gagne (left) opened a new era of "clean" wrestling. But is he really clean?

WHERE would television be without the drama bug? Since, quite naturally, there's a little ham in all of us, athletes in particular have become prone to giving dramatic performances.

Wrestling, for example, requires all the attributes of a good actor. To ply his trade properly, a grappling must be capable of giving convincing demonstrations of pain, anguish and fury. This need not imply wrestling is phony. It's good entertainment. State Commissions governing wrestling and boxing rate the grappling game as an exhibition or show and not a contest.

One of Chicago's prime examples of exhibitionism was Zuma, the man from Mars. Without his fantastic costume (which he has since discarded), Carl Engstrom would be just another wrestler named Carl. Gorgeous George without his curls, or Don Eagle without his haircut, or Mighty Atlas without his conceit would be drab and dull entertainment. A wrestler relies on his gimmick to become successful.

Even Verne Gagne, who is proclaimed to be a clean, straight wrestler has his "sleeper" hold. He performs well and knows how to arouse crowds. To work Gagne to the best advantage, promoters generally pit Verne against villains. A clean cut boy fighting a known brute wins the crowd’s sympathy and eventually, with the crowd booing the villain, Gagne manages to come out on top.

Nobody is hurt and millions of people are entertained. Although it has never been proven, the outcome of wrestling matches is predetermined. Nobody should bet on wrestling. It’s not a competitive sport.

Another popular TV sport, the roller derby, appears on the screen as packed with tough, hardened young men and women madly whirling about the rounded track at break neck speeds.

Actually there’s a realistic limit to their aggressiveness. Derby skaters learn to fall, to give the impression of losing balance and to get into “scraps.” The derby’s most colorful skaters; Toughie Brasuhn, Gerry Murray, Bert Wall, Elbows Anderson, Mary Gardner, etc., are all trained in the art of flying into an uncontrollable rage with flying fists. The result is the penalty box for the offenders and thrills for the fans.

At first glance, boxing on TV appears as a difficult sport to “ham-up,” yet like wrestling, it really offers the greatest number of opportunities. Welterweight Champion Kid Gavilan introduced the “bolo punch.” Far from a damaging blow, the bolo looks vicious and invariably draws a loud moan from fans. . . . Many former fighters have turned to professional dramatics at the close of their boxing careers. Most notable of which are Max and Buddy Baer and Maxie Rosenbloom.

But athletes are not the only ones inclined to ham-boning. Referees too are prone to dramatic exploitations. Boxing referees make the most of their nationwide audiences in instructing fighters by slowly but clearly enunciating every word with authority. Basketball referees such as Jimmy Enright delight fans by gingerly prancing their heavy frames about the court and pertly singing out fouls.

The fact that the White Sox and Cubs kid each other about their shenanigans on the field (when TV cameras are turned on) reveals their awareness of being “on camera.” Nellie Fox delights in chewing tobacco to compensate for his dwarfness. Andy Pafko’s headlong slides, Ted Williams’ feuding with fans, Charley Grimm’s clowning antics, Bill Veeck’s sensationalism, Minoso’s daring stolen bases, Bobo Newsom’s deliberate, slow windup, and Leo Durocher’s squabbles with the umpires are all largely for the fans benefit.

Way back in the year 1825, the United States government made a $1,000 offer for the best design to be placed on a new one-cent coin. And about the same time, a large group of Indian chiefs arrived in Washington for a meeting with the President, who was trying to promote peace between the Indians and western pioneers.

After the welcoming ceremony, the Indian chiefs were shown around Washington, and later journeyed to Philadelphia to visit the government mint. The chief engraver for the government at that time was James Barton Longacre, who invited the Indians to his home.

The Indian chief who acted as spokesman made quite a fuss over Mr. Longacre's 10 year old daughter, Sara. He even took off his headdress of eagle feathers and placed it on the little girl's head. While she was wearing it, one of the officials with the party, who was also an artist, made a sketch of her and gave it to the little girl.

Mr. Longacre liked the drawing so much, he sent it to Washington as a possible design for the new one-cent coin—and it was accepted. That is the way the so-called Indian head penny came into being. The government no longer makes them.

If you have one around the house, examine the design very closely. You'll notice hair coming down below the Indian head piece and hanging down on the neck.

No, believe it or not, this design is not of an Indian head, but of a little 10 year old girl named Sara Longacre wearing an Indian headdress.

"Silhouettes of the West" is seen on channel 4 at 5:30 p.m., Monday thru Friday.

Tony Pellone (l.) causes Al Constantina's head to snap back during their fight at St. Nicholas Arena in Brooklyn. Pellone, a rough, brawling boxer, was awarded the decision.

HOW FORECAST RATES ‘EM . . .
Here's a fresh and absolutely new rating system for TV fight fans. Each month, TV Forecast's sports staff will publish boxing's top five on the basis of aggressiveness, defensive work, skill in ring generalship, and sportsmanship. In some instances, our staff has failed to recognize current champions as the best fighters in their divisions . . . Your criticisms are welcome.

YEAR'S BIGGEST FLUKE

HE A T E R S EDGE

Because of his impressive string of victories, Randy Turpin rates as a superior fighter to middleweight champion Ray Robinson. Where Robinson has slowed with age, Turpin has improved with experience. If the two are rematched Randy should regain the crown.

HE SAVES FACE

Following his sensational TKO over Joe Louis, Rocky Marciana (above) disappointed fight fans with a dismal showing against Lee Savold. Now, after a fresh victory over Harry Mathews, Rocky has saved face and is once again rated.
